RUSSIA'S NEW LOOK
Edward Crankshaw
2s. 6d.

The promotion of human rights can fairly be raised at a primary activity of the United Nations Organization. The language of the Charter is sufficiently wide, and the principles enshrined in it are, in theory, not without important influence.

The importance of this is magnified and made all the greater by the fact that the Charter was adopted as a result of a series of informal discussions, and that it was drafted by a large number of states.

The United Nations Charter is therefore a document of great importance.

The Charter provides that:

1. The United Nations shall be open to all states, large or small,
whether their society is established by law or custom.

2. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principles of international law and of international opinion
established by custom.

3. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principle of self-determination of peoples.

4. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principle of equal rights of men and women.

5. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

6. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

7. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

8. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

9. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

10. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

The Charter provides that:

11. The United Nations shall be open to all states, large or small,
whether their society is established by law or custom.

12. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principles of international law and of international opinion
established by custom.

13. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principle of self-determination of peoples.

14. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

15. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

16. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

17. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

18. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

19. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

20. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

The Charter provides that:

21. The United Nations shall be open to all states, large or small,
whether their society is established by law or custom.

22. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principles of international law and of international opinion
established by custom.

23. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principle of self-determination of peoples.

24. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

25. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

26. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

27. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

28. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

29. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

30. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

The Charter provides that:

31. The United Nations shall be open to all states, large or small,
whether their society is established by law or custom.

32. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principles of international law and of international opinion
established by custom.

33. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principle of self-determination of peoples.

34. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

35. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

36. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

37. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

38. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

39. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

40. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

The Charter provides that:

41. The United Nations shall be open to all states, large or small,
whether their society is established by law or custom.

42. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principles of international law and of international opinion
established by custom.

43. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principle of self-determination of peoples.

44. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

45. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

46. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

47. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

48. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

49. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

50. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

The Charter provides that:

51. The United Nations shall be open to all states, large or small,
whether their society is established by law or custom.

52. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principles of international law and of international opinion
established by custom.

53. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principle of self-determination of peoples.

54. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

55. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

56. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

57. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

58. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

59. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for
the principle of equal rights of men and women.

60. The United Nations shall promote and encourage respect for the principle of equal rights of men and women.